SWIM MEET

AT THE UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA
NORMAN, OKLAHOMA, MARCH 10-11, 1950

PRESIDENT
George L. Cross

GREETINGS FROM UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA

It is seldom that the University of Oklahoma has the distinction of being host to a Big Seven Conference athletic championship conference. The swimming meet of 1939 and the cross country meet of 1946 are the only conferences ever to come to Norman, in my memory.

So it is with more than ordinary pleasure that the University welcomes the visiting swimmers and their entourages from Iowa State, Colorado, Nebraska and Kansas to our campus for the 18th annual Big Seven Conference swimming and diving championships in the fine Oklahoma pool.

We are happy to have you here, and to become better acquainted with you. Make yourselves at home. And the best of luck to you all.

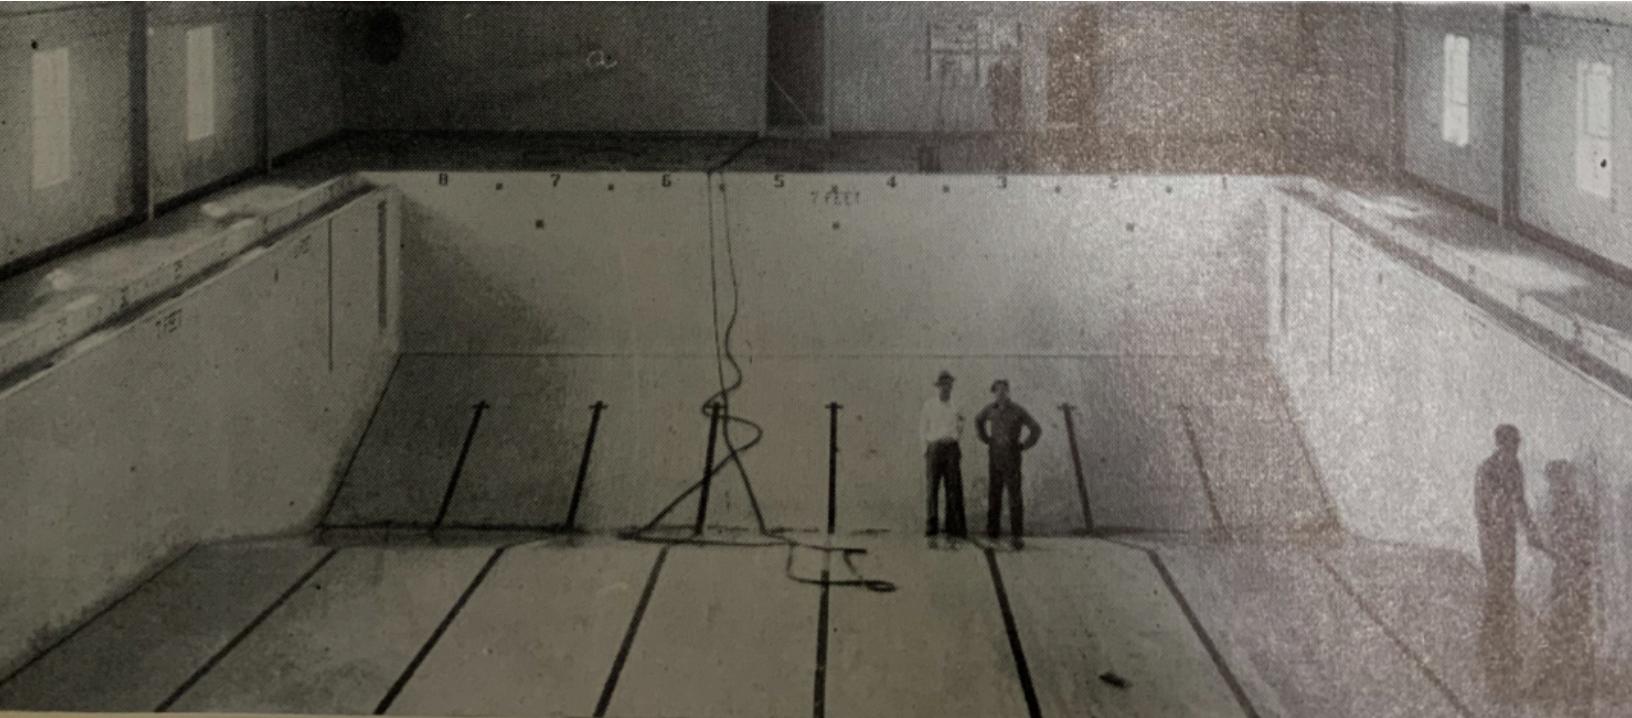

Cordially,

President, University of Oklahoma

BUD WILKINSON
OU athletic director

JOE GLANDER
Manager of the meet

HISTORY OF SWIMMING

Swimming probably ranks close to running, jumping and throwing as the oldest sport of all. We know that even the overhand swimming stroke was practiced by the Romans. Their paintings and mosaics show swimmers cutting through the water overhand, and others swimming with their faces in the water, which suggests the speedy crawl of modern times.

In modern times, Charlemagne was noted for his swimming stroke, King Louis XI of France often swam in the Seine at the head of his courtiers, and the swimming couriers of Peru traversed hundreds of miles of the South American continent swimming day and night down the rivers. They were aided only by a light log of wood, and their dispatches were enclosed in turbans on their heads.

Several exceptional swimming accomplishments in history have been recorded. One of the most unusual was that of a famous Neapolitan diver nicknamed El Pesce, or "The Fish," who once swam fifty miles without stopping along the coast of Calabria in Southern Italy. Another almost unbelievable episode occurred in 1769: A vessel overturning in a squall off Martinique in the French West Indies was lost. Its entire crew of Europeans were drowned. However, a Carib, after battling the violence of the tempest as well as hunger and thirst for sixty hours, reached land safely.

The most modern is, of course, the aquatic spanning in August, 1926, of the foggy English Channel by Gertrude Ederle, a nineteen-year-old American girl, who swam the thirty-one miles between England and France in fourteen hours thirty-one minutes, breaking by more than two hours all previous records established by any of the five men who had swum this treacherous stretch before her. This in spite of the fact that Benjamin Franklin had said that the only way anyone would ever swim the English Channel was on the back with one leg extended vertically and a sail attached to it.
